

BARRA PARTNERSHIPS

At Cafe Barra, our business to business relationships are approached as prospective partnerships, business allies, as opposed to our being just another vendor. It's important to us that when people taste Cafe Barra coffee, it is the best version of the coffee we took the time to roast . In this way our business relationships are be mutually beneficial. Your customers will get the best Cafe Barra has to offer.

We believe in the importance of the Last Mile approach, meaning the coffee preparation isn't complete until the customer has their first sip. The last mile starts with the roasting and ends in the cup. Here's how we achieve this.

We train your staff not only about the coffees we roast, but also how to get the best cup of coffee using the equipment you already own, including the grinders, drip coffee machines, espresso machines, etc... This is not so say that they are not already trained how to use the equipment, but each roast requires adjustments to maximize the taste, and we will be there to ensure this, not just at the beginning, but throughout our working relationship. We also conduct Curiosity Labs, a deeper dive into the coffee experience, that we do for crew and/or patrons.

I have owned and operated a couple of cafes and I learned that by empowering a crew with the knowledge of the coffee that they are selling to the customers, they are more vested in the experience, more excited about the coffee they are selling. It benefits everyone involved.

We have a few questions for my prospective partners.

Are you paying premium prices for commodity coffee?

What do your customers think about the coffee you currently serve?

What if you could raise your coffee program and profits without any more work for you?

Please let us know if we can set up a meeting.
